

Marriage, according to the Bible, is a sacred and lifelong covenant established by God. The Bible provides clear guidelines on the purpose of marriage, as well as the conditions under which divorce is permitted. Below is a clear and organized explanation of what the Bible says about marriage and divorce.

1. The Divine Purpose of Marriage

In Matthew 19:3-8, Jesus gives the foundational view of marriage:

- God designed marriage to be a union between one man and one woman (Matthew 19:4-5).
- “For this reason a man will leave his father and mother and be united to his wife, and the two will become one flesh” (Matthew 19:5).
- God intended marriage to be a lifelong bond: “What God has joined together, let no one separate” (Matthew 19:6).

Marriage was created by God to be a union of love, companionship, and faithfulness. It is meant to be an unbreakable bond that reflects God's love for His people.

2. When Is Divorce Allowed?

While marriage is intended to be lifelong, the Bible acknowledges that divorce may be necessary under certain circumstances. The primary reasons for divorce outlined in the Bible are:

A) Adultery (Sexual Immorality)

In Matthew 19:9, Jesus allows divorce in the case of adultery:

- “I tell you that anyone who divorces his wife, except for sexual immorality, and marries another woman commits adultery.”
- Adultery is a form of betrayal that breaks the covenant of marriage, and the innocent spouse is permitted to divorce and remarry.

However, forgiveness is encouraged. Just as Christ forgives us for spiritual unfaithfulness, we are encouraged to forgive our spouses and seek reconciliation if possible. Regarding forgiveness, Jesus tells us to forgive “seven times seventy” (Matthew 18:22), which emphasizes that there is no room for divorce unless absolutely necessary. It is far, far, far from God’s ideal, and divorce should be the last option after every effort of reconciliation has been exhausted.

B) Abandonment by an Unbelieving Spouse

In cases where one spouse is a believer and the other is not, the Bible allows for divorce if the unbelieving spouse chooses to leave. This situation is explained in 1 Corinthians 7:12-16:

- If a believing spouse is married to an unbeliever who is willing to live with them, they should stay together.
- If the unbelieving spouse chooses to leave, the believer is no longer bound in the marriage, and they are free to remarry.

However, if the unbelieving spouse is willing to stay, the believing spouse is expected to remain faithful.

3. What Does the Bible Say About Remarriage?

- Remarriage after Divorce: If divorce occurs due to sexual immorality, the innocent spouse is allowed to remarry. However, in cases where divorce happens for any other reason (e.g., disagreements, hardship, etc.), remarriage is not allowed.
- 1 Corinthians 7:10-11 states: “A wife must not separate from her husband... and a husband must not divorce his wife.” If separation occurs, reconciliation is encouraged.

In the case of a believer being abandoned by an unbelieving spouse, they are free to remarry, but it must be “in the Lord” (1 Corinthians 7:39).

4. The Sanctity and Importance of Marriage

The Bible emphasizes that marriage should be honored and respected by everyone. In Hebrews 13:4, we read:

- “Let marriage be held in honor among all, and let the marriage bed be undefiled; for God will judge the sexually immoral and adulterous.”

God takes marriage seriously, and His desire is for couples to remain faithful and committed to each other. Malachi 2:16 expresses God’s disapproval of divorce: “For I hate divorce, says the Lord God of Israel.”

5. The Spiritual Impact of Divorce

Divorce, according to the Bible, brings spiritual consequences:

- It hinders the blessings God wants to bestow on the family.
- Children of divorced parents may experience emotional and spiritual consequences, feeling like they have lost the security and stability of both parents.

- A broken marriage can also set the individual back spiritually, hindering growth and blessings in their relationship with God.

Therefore, it is essential to work toward healing, forgiveness, and reconciliation, as divorce should be a last resort.

6. What Does God Want from Married Couples?

Marriage should be characterized by:

- Love and Faithfulness: Husbands are called to love their wives as Christ loved the Church (Ephesians 5:25). Wives are to respect their husbands (Ephesians 5:33).
- Forgiveness: Just as Christ forgives our sins, we are called to forgive our spouses. Matthew 18:21-22 tells us to forgive “seventy-seven times,” showing that forgiveness should be abundant and ongoing.

- Commitment to Reconciliation: Jesus calls couples to reconcile, and if separation occurs, they should not remarry unless there has been adultery.

Conclusion: The Importance of Marriage and Staying Committed

Marriage is a gift from God and should be cherished. It is meant to reflect the relationship between Christ and the Church. Divorce, though allowed in certain cases, is not God’s ideal, and it is only permitted in the case of sexual immorality or abandonment by an unbelieving spouse.

Married couples are encouraged to work through difficulties, seek forgiveness, and remain committed to one another. God’s grace and blessings are available to those who honor their marriage vows and maintain a relationship of love, respect, and faithfulness.

May God bless your marriage and guide you in every step.
