

WHAT WILL KEEP US RUNNING WITHOUT SLOWING DOWN?

As Paul approached the very end of his mission, he was unmoved by troubling news or warnings. In fact, he openly acknowledged that the Holy Spirit had testified to him in every city that imprisonment and suffering awaited him in Jerusalem. Yet he still declared,

Acts 21:13, ESV)

“I am ready not only to be bound, but also to die in Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus”

This demonstrates an essential truth: a true servant of God is motivated not by comfort or safety but by obedience to God’s calling. Paul’s focus was unwavering; his eyes were fixed on the ultimate reward—faithfulness to God’s mission, rather than avoidance of suffering.

Acts 20:23-24 (NIV)

“...the Holy Spirit warns me in every city that imprisonment and hardships are facing me. However, I consider my life worth nothing to me; my only aim is to finish the race and complete the task the Lord Jesus has given me—the task of testifying to the good news of God’s grace.”

Notice Paul’s prioritization: life itself holds no value compared to finishing the divine assignment. This illustrates a central principle of Christian discipleship: the calling and service of God surpass personal comfort, ambition, or fear. Theologically, this echoes Jesus’ teaching that following Him requires complete surrender:

Luke 9:23, NIV).

“Whoever wants to be my disciple must deny themselves and take up their cross daily and follow me”

Even when a prophet named Agabus prophesied Paul's impending suffering (Acts 21:10-11, NIV), Paul remained resolute. He understood the truth of God's sovereignty and the purpose of suffering in the life of the believer. Suffering was not meaningless; it was part of the refining process (Romans 5:3-5, ESV), shaping him into the image of Christ and strengthening the testimony of the Gospel.

1 Corinthians 9:24-27 (ESV) provides a vivid analogy: the Christian life is like a race:

"Do you not know that in a race all the runners run, but only one receives the prize? So run that you may obtain it. Every athlete exercises self-control in all things. They do it to receive a perishable wreath, but we an imperishable. I therefore do not run like one who runs aimlessly; I do not box like one beating the air. But I discipline my body and keep it under control, lest after preaching to others I myself should be disqualified."

Here Paul shows that spiritual discipline is essential. A Christian who knows the goal—the eternal reward—will not indulge in ease or distraction but will live intentionally, exercising self-control, enduring trials, and focusing on the ultimate prize: eternal life and God's commendation.

Jesus Christ as the Ultimate Example

Paul's unwavering commitment mirrors that of Jesus Himself. The Scriptures tell us that as the time for His ascension approached, "He set His face resolutely toward Jerusalem" (Luke 9:51, NIV). Theologically, this signifies divine intentionality. Jesus knew His suffering and death were imminent, yet He pressed forward to fulfill God's redemptive plan.

Luke 9:51-53 (ESV):

"When the days drew near for him to be taken up, he set his face to go to Jerusalem. And he sent messengers ahead of him. They went and entered a village of the Samaritans to make preparations for him. But the people did not receive him because his face was set toward Jerusalem."

“Setting one’s face” is a biblical expression for unwavering resolve in the fulfillment of God’s purpose. It shows that divine obedience often requires pressing forward despite opposition, danger, or discomfort. Jesus’ mission was marked by intentionality and steadfastness—a model for all who run the race of faith.

John 10:17-18 (NIV) emphasizes Jesus’ voluntary submission:

“The reason my Father loves me is that I lay down my life—only to take it up again. No one takes it from me, but I lay it down of my own accord. I have authority to lay it down and authority to take it up again. This command I received from my Father.”

Theologically, Jesus’ deliberate journey to the cross shows the intersection of divine sovereignty, human obedience, and sacrificial love. Even in the face of imminent suffering, the purpose of glorifying God and redeeming humanity was His priority.

Practical Application: Running Our Spiritual Race

The question for us today is this: in this season of life, are we running at full speed, or have we slowed our pace in faith? Perhaps we are discouraged by challenges, high mountains, or prolonged trials. But Christian theology reminds us that every obstacle can be seen as part of God's refining work. Our race is not about comfort—it is about perseverance, faithfulness, and eternal reward.

2 Timothy 2:5 (ESV):

"An athlete is not crowned unless he competes according to the rules."

To receive God's reward, we must run with purpose, discipline, and perseverance. Spiritual rewards require effort, endurance, and steadfast commitment, just as physical crowns are only given to those who compete according to the rules.

Therefore, like Paul and Jesus, we must press forward, ignoring distractions, discouragement, and opposition. Our focus must remain fixed on the prize that awaits us in eternity, knowing that the present struggles are temporary, but the reward is eternal.

Shalom.
