

What does the prophecy of the dry bones mean for us today, both spiritually and practically?

The prophet Ezekiel, who lived during the Babylonian exile (6th century BC), was shown a vision by God that profoundly illustrated Israel's spiritual condition and God's promise of national and spiritual restoration (Ezekiel 37:1-14). The dry bones represent the people of Israel, who had been "dead" in captivity, feeling hopeless and cut off from their homeland and from God's presence.

This vision is not only a literal promise of physical restoration God bringing Israel back from exile but also a powerful metaphor for spiritual revival. The bones "very dry" (Ezekiel 37:2, NIV) symbolize utter hopelessness and death, both physical and spiritual. The question God poses, "Can these bones live?" (v. 3, NIV), invites Ezekiel and through him, all believers to trust in God's power to restore life.

(Ezekiel 37:1-14)

Ezekiel 37:1-14 (NIV)

“The hand of the Lord was on me, and he brought me out by the Spirit of the Lord and set me in the middle of a valley; it was full of bones. He led me back and forth among them, and I saw a great many bones on the floor of the valley, bones that were very dry.”

God commands Ezekiel to prophesy to the bones, symbolizing the Spirit’s power to bring life to what is dead (v. 4-6). When Ezekiel obeys, the bones come together, sinews and flesh appear, and breath (the Hebrew ruach, meaning breath, wind, or spirit) enters them, bringing them to life (v. 7-10). This reveals a profound truth: life is impossible without the Spirit of God (cf. John 6:63; Ezekiel 37:14).

God explicitly identifies the bones as “the whole house of Israel,” who feel hopeless, “Our bones are dried up, and our hope is gone; we are cut off” (v. 11, NIV). But He promises restoration, resurrection, and a renewed relationship: “I will put my Spirit in you, and you will live... Then you will know that I am the Lord” (v. 14).

This passage beautifully connects with several biblical themes:

EZEKIEL AND THE PROPHECY OF THE DRY BONES: A MESSAGE OF HOPE AND RESTORATION

- Resurrection and Spiritual Renewal: The dry bones vision prefigures both the national restoration of Israel and the spiritual resurrection of God's people. The New Testament echoes this life giving Spirit in Jesus Christ (John 11:25-26; Romans 8:11).
- God's Sovereignty and Faithfulness: Despite Israel's apparent hopelessness, God's power to restore is absolute. This assurance strengthens faith and encourages believers who feel spiritually or physically "dead."
- The Role of Prophecy and the Spirit: Ezekiel's obedience to prophesy illustrates that God's Word and Spirit are essential instruments of life and renewal (2 Timothy 3:16-17; John 20:22).

Connection to Abraham's Faith

The message of hope through faith is echoed in Hebrews 11, where Abraham's willingness to sacrifice Isaac demonstrates trust in God's power to give life (Hebrews 11:17-19, NIV):

"By faith Abraham, when God tested him, offered Isaac as a sacrifice. He who had received the promises was about to sacrifice his one and only son... Abraham reasoned that God could raise the dead, and figuratively speaking, he did receive Isaac back from death."

This links perfectly with the dry bones vision, emphasizing faith in God's life giving power.
