

Understanding Fasting and Its Purpose

Fasting is a spiritual discipline where a believer voluntarily refrains from something often food or drink for a specific period to draw nearer to God (Matthew 6:16-18, NIV). The purpose of fasting is not merely physical abstinence but to foster spiritual intimacy through prayer, repentance, and focused devotion.

People fast from various things depending on their spiritual goals: some avoid eating or drinking, others may abstain from sleep, work, or even communication. The key is to remove distractions so you can deepen your relationship with God.

Sexual Relations During a Fast

The question arises: Is it permissible to engage in sexual relations during a fast?

The Bible does not explicitly forbid sexual intimacy during fasting. Since the traditional fast usually involves refraining from food and drink, engaging in sexual relations is not inherently contradictory to fasting.

However,

1 Corinthians 7:3-5 (ESV) gives important guidance on marital intimacy:

“The husband should give to his wife her conjugal rights, and likewise the wife to her husband. For the wife does not have authority over her own body, but the husband does. Likewise the husband does not have authority over his own body, but the wife does. Do not deprive one another, except perhaps by agreement for a limited time, that you may devote yourselves to prayer; but then come together again, so that Satan may not tempt you because of your lack of self-control.”

This passage highlights mutual consent and temporary abstinence for prayerful focus but warns against prolonged withholding, which can lead to temptation.

Application

- If both spouses mutually agree to abstain from sexual relations during a fast to devote more time to prayer and spiritual focus, this is commendable and biblically supported.
- If one partner does not agree, the other should not refuse intimacy because marriage involves mutual authority over each other's bodies. Refusing without mutual consent is discouraged (1 Corinthians 7:4, NIV).
- Sexual intimacy during fasting, therefore, does not break the fast unless your fast's specific purpose includes abstaining from sex as part of your spiritual discipline.

Fasting is ultimately about seeking God's presence and strengthening spiritual discipline (Joel 2:12-13, NIV). Marital intimacy is a God-ordained good (Hebrews 13:4, ESV), designed to strengthen the marital bond and should be handled with love, respect, and mutual agreement.

Engaging in intimacy during a fast is not sinful or a violation of fasting unless your personal or mutual fast explicitly includes it. It's essential that the fast enriches your walk with God without causing unnecessary conflict in your marriage.

Summary

- Fasting = voluntary abstinence primarily from food/drink for spiritual focus.
- Sex during fasting = permitted unless mutually agreed to abstain.
- Mutual consent and love in marriage are biblical mandates.
- Scripture encourages prayerful abstinence only for limited times.
- Your fast should bring you closer to God and strengthen your marriage, not cause division.

May God richly bless you as you seek Him with all your heart.
