

Silvanus is another name for Silas. In the original Greek, his name appears as “Silas,” but in Latin, it is translated as “Silvanus.” Therefore, Silvanus and Silas refer to the same person in the Scriptures.

The story of Silvanus/Silas is mostly found in the book of Acts. He was one of the two prophets chosen by the elders of the church in Jerusalem to accompany Paul and Barnabas in delivering a letter of agreement to the Gentile churches. This letter was sent after the Council of Jerusalem in Acts 15, where the apostles and elders addressed the issue of whether Gentile Christians should follow Jewish law. Silvanus, along with Judas (also called Barsabbas), was sent to deliver this important letter to confirm the church’s stance on the matter (Acts 15:22-23).

After completing their mission in Antioch, where they delivered the letter, Judas returned to Jerusalem, but Silvanus chose to remain with Paul. He joined Paul on his missionary journeys, helping to spread the gospel to the Gentiles.

What do we know about Silvanus (Silas)?

Imprisonment in Philippi:

Silas is most famously known for being imprisoned and beaten alongside Paul in the city of Philippi. According to Acts 16:19-25 (NIV), after Paul cast a demon out of a slave girl, the city officials ordered both Paul and Silas to be beaten and thrown into prison. Despite their suffering, they prayed and sang hymns to God in the prison, and an earthquake miraculously opened the doors, leading to the conversion of the jailer and his family. This event illustrates Silas's unwavering faith and dedication to God's mission, even in the face of severe persecution.

Acts 16:25-34 (NIV): "About midnight Paul and Silas were praying and singing hymns to God, and the other prisoners were listening to them. Suddenly there was such a violent earthquake that the foundations of the prison were shaken. At once all the prison doors flew open, and everyone's chains came loose. The jailer woke up, and when he saw the prison doors open, he drew his sword and was about to kill himself because he thought the prisoners had escaped. But Paul shouted, 'Don't harm yourself! We are all here!'"

Co-author of the Letters to the Thessalonians:

Silas is mentioned as a co-author of the two letters to the Thessalonian church, alongside Paul and Timothy. In

1 Thessalonians 1:1 (NIV), Paul writes:

“Paul, Silas, and Timothy, To the church of the Thessalonians in God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ: Grace and peace to you.”

This shows Silas’s important role in the early church, contributing to the doctrinal teachings alongside the apostles.

Ministry in Berea:

Silas, along with Paul, continued to preach the gospel in various cities. Acts 17:10 (NIV) records how the brothers in Thessalonica sent Paul and Silas away to Berea to avoid danger from those who opposed their message. In Berea, they preached in the synagogue, and many people believed.

Acts 17:10-11 (NIV): “As soon as it was night, the brothers sent Paul and Silas away to Berea. On arriving there, they went to the Jewish synagogue. Now the Bereans were of more noble character than the Thessalonians, for they received the message with great eagerness and examined the Scriptures every day to see if what Paul said was true.”

Ministry in Macedonia and Corinth:

Silas also served alongside Paul in Macedonia and Corinth. In Acts 15:40-41 (NIV), after a disagreement between Paul and Barnabas, Paul chose Silas as his new companion for his missionary journey. Together, they traveled through Syria and Cilicia, strengthening the churches. Later, Silas joined Paul in Corinth, where they worked together to preach the gospel and establish the church.

Silvanus as a Messenger of Peter:

In 1 Peter 5:12 (NIV), Silvanus is described as a “faithful brother” and the one who helped Peter write his first epistle. Peter acknowledges Silvanus’s assistance in delivering the letter and testifies to his reliability.

1 Peter 5:12 (NIV): “With the help of Silvanus, whom I regard as a faithful brother, I have written to you briefly, encouraging you and testifying that this is the true grace of God. Stand fast in it.”

What can we learn from Silas?

Silas's life offers several key lessons for Christians today. First, his faithfulness to God and his willingness to suffer for the gospel serve as a powerful example of commitment to Christ. Despite being imprisoned and beaten, Silas did not waver in his devotion to God's mission. His example challenges believers to remain steadfast in faith, even when faced with trials.

Silas's actions remind us of Ruth's loyalty. Just as Ruth chose to stay with Naomi in a foreign land, despite her own hardships, Silas chose to endure suffering and continue spreading the gospel rather than return to the safety of Jerusalem. Both of them displayed a deep commitment to their respective callings, even when it meant facing great personal sacrifice.

In the early church, Silas was an important link between the apostles. He worked with both Peter and Paul, showing a unique ability to serve across different ministries and regions. His service was not limited to one area or one group of apostles; rather, he was a bridge connecting various parts of the early church, always ready to serve wherever needed.

Finally, Silas's faithfulness in his ministry encourages us to be fully devoted to God's work. Just as Silas went above and beyond in his service, we too are called to be faithful and diligent in our calling, whatever it may be. Silas shows us that true faithfulness to God is about more than just fulfilling obligations; it's about giving our whole selves to His mission.

May the Lord give us a heart like Silas's—ready to fully dedicate ourselves to His service, wherever we are sent, and to go beyond what is expected of us for His glory.

God bless you.
