

Exegesis (Exegesis) vs Eisegesis (Eisegesis): What's the Difference?
What's the Difference?

Exegesis vs Eisegesis: Exegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible, while Eisegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on a preconceived idea or doctrine.

1) Exegesis (Exegesis)

Exegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible, while Eisegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on a preconceived idea or doctrine. Exegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible, while Eisegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on a preconceived idea or doctrine.

Sola Scriptura (Sola Scriptura) is the principle that the Bible is the only source of authority for the Christian faith.

“The Bible is the only source of authority for the Christian faith, and it is the only source of authority for the Christian faith. The Bible is the only source of authority for the Christian faith, and it is the only source of authority for the Christian faith.”

Exegesis (Exegesis) vs. Eisegesis (Eisegesis): Which is better?
Which is more accurate?

(2 Corinthians 3:16-17)

Exegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible, while Eisegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on one's own preconceptions.

- Exegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on the text itself, while Eisegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on one's own preconceptions.
- Exegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on the text itself, while Eisegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on one's own preconceptions.
- Exegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on the text itself, while Eisegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on one's own preconceptions.
- Exegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on the text itself, while Eisegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on one's own preconceptions.

2) Eisegesis (Eisegesis)

Exegesis (Exegesis) vs Eisegesis (Eisegesis): What's the difference?
What's the difference between the two?

“... and the Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he has anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor. He has sent me to proclaim liberty to the captives, and opening of the eyes to the blind, to proclaim liberty to the captives and opening of the eyes to the blind, to proclaim liberty to the captives and opening of the eyes to the blind.”
(Luke 4:18)

Exegesis is the process of drawing out the meaning of a text from the text itself, based on the context and the author's intent. It is a method of interpretation that seeks to understand the text on its own terms, without imposing external ideas or assumptions. Exegesis is often contrasted with eisegesis, which is the process of imposing one's own ideas or assumptions onto a text.

Eisegesis is the process of imposing one's own ideas or assumptions onto a text. It is a method of interpretation that seeks to understand the text through the lens of one's own beliefs or preconceptions. Eisegesis is often contrasted with exegesis, which is the process of drawing out the meaning of a text from the text itself.

“... and the Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he has anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor. He has sent me to proclaim liberty to the captives, and opening of the eyes to the blind, to proclaim liberty to the captives and opening of the eyes to the blind, to proclaim liberty to the captives and opening of the eyes to the blind.”
(Luke 4:18)

“... and the Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he has anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor. He has sent me to proclaim liberty to the captives, and opening of the eyes to the blind, to proclaim liberty to the captives and opening of the eyes to the blind, to proclaim liberty to the captives and opening of the eyes to the blind.”

Exegesis (Exegesis) vs. Eisegesis (Eisegesis): Which is better?
Which is more accurate?

(1 John 5:7)

John 5:7

John 5:7 is a well-known verse that has been the subject of much debate. The verse reads: "For three witnesses are given in heaven: the Father, the Word, and the Holy Spirit, and these three are one." The verse is often cited as evidence for the Trinity. However, many scholars believe that the verse is a later addition to the text of the Gospel of John. This is because the verse is not found in the earliest manuscripts of the Gospel, and it appears to be a later interpolation. The verse is also problematic because it seems to contradict the doctrine of the Trinity, which holds that the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit are three distinct persons who are co-equal and co-eternal with the Father. The verse is also problematic because it seems to suggest that the Father, the Word, and the Holy Spirit are three distinct persons who are co-equal and co-eternal with the Father. The verse is also problematic because it seems to suggest that the Father, the Word, and the Holy Spirit are three distinct persons who are co-equal and co-eternal with the Father.

"For three witnesses are given in heaven: the Father, the Word, and the Holy Spirit, and these three are one."

(2 John 1:20)

Eisegesis is a method of interpretation that involves reading one's own beliefs and assumptions into a text.

- The verse is often cited as evidence for the Trinity. However, many scholars believe that the verse is a later addition to the text of the Gospel of John. This is because the verse is not found in the earliest manuscripts of the Gospel, and it appears to be a later interpolation. The verse is also problematic because it seems to contradict the doctrine of the Trinity, which holds that the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit are three distinct persons who are co-equal and co-eternal with the Father. The verse is also problematic because it seems to suggest that the Father, the Word, and the Holy Spirit are three distinct persons who are co-equal and co-eternal with the Father.

Exegesis) vs. Eisegesis: What's the difference?
How do we interpret the Bible?

Exegesis vs. Eisegesis

- Exegesis: Interpretation of the text based on the original context and language.

Exegesis is the process of interpreting the text based on the original context and language. Eisegesis is the process of interpreting the text based on the interpreter's own preconceptions and biases.

“Exegesis is the process of interpreting the text based on the original context and language; Eisegesis is the process of interpreting the text based on the interpreter's own preconceptions and biases.”
(2 Corinthians 4:2)

Exegesis vs. Eisegesis

Share on:
WhatsApp

Exegesis (Exegesis) vs. Eisegesis (Eisegesis): What's the difference?
Exegesis vs. Eisegesis: What's the difference?

Print this post