

Exegesis (Exegesis) vs. Eisegesis (Eisegesis): Which is better?
Which is more accurate?

(2 Corinthians 3:16-17)

Exegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible, while Eisegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on one's own preconceptions.

- Exegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on the text itself, while Eisegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on one's own preconceptions.
- Exegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on the text itself, while Eisegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on one's own preconceptions.
- Exegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on the text itself, while Eisegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on one's own preconceptions.
- Exegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on the text itself, while Eisegesis is the process of interpreting the text of the Bible based on one's own preconceptions.

2) Eisegesis (Eisegesis)

Exegesis (Exegesis) vs Eisegesis (Eisegesis): What's the difference?
What's the difference between the two?

“... and the Spirit of the Lord is with you, and you are wise, and you have knowledge, and you have been able to bear with me in my affliction.”
(1 Peter 4:13)

Exegesis is the process of drawing out the meaning of a text from the text itself, rather than imposing one's own ideas or preconceptions onto the text. It involves a careful and objective analysis of the text, taking into account the historical and cultural context, the author's intent, and the text's structure and language. Exegesis is a key component of biblical scholarship and is essential for understanding the true meaning of a text.

Eisegesis is the process of imposing one's own ideas or preconceptions onto a text, rather than drawing out the meaning from the text itself. It involves a subjective and often biased interpretation of the text, where the reader's own beliefs and assumptions are used to shape the meaning of the text. Eisegesis is often criticized for being a form of eisegesis, where the reader's own ideas are imposed onto the text.

“... and the Spirit of the Lord is with you, and you are wise, and you have knowledge, and you have been able to bear with me in my affliction.”
(1 Peter 4:13)

“... and the Spirit of the Lord is with you, and you are wise, and you have knowledge, and you have been able to bear with me in my affliction.”
...”

